FAHAD RAHMAN

FULL STACK DEVELOPER

ABOUT ME

Honestly, before I knew anything about programming, I was just living a scripted life. I was studying medicine because my parents told me to. Though the idea of being in the field of computer science crossed my mind several times, it was all unclear and confusing. Luckily during this lockdown period, I again tried to do some research and I got introduced to web development, and now the only thing the needed was hard work, so I did put my effort and started with website development so I taught myself all the basics and I am still learning. It was a risk switching career but I was so sure about myself and knew that this is meant for me. Also, someone said that. "The biggest risk is not taking any risk".
